

The day coral met the king

One sunny summer morning, Coral was putting on her most beautiful dress because the King was coming to visit her school today.

Coral and her friends had been extra good and done all of their work, including their recycling project which they thought the king would love.

So mountains class wrote to the King about it and they sent him some of the art from their project. He thought it was very creative and wrote back saying I am going to come to your school.

When they heard about this news they were super excited. When he arrived they couldn't believe their eyes. He was so pretty they fainted. He was wearing his crown and his cloak. Before the king left, Coral was brave and said: "Hello I was wondering if you would sign our book so we remember your visit. Thank you".

The King said: "Sure do you have a pen?"

Cofal said: "I don't have a pen but I do have a pencil. Would you like to borrow it?"

"Yes Please" the King said. "I hope it writes better than some of the pens I get given!"
